Biographical/Historical Note

Sedgwick is a small town located near the Lawrence-Craighead county line on modern-day route 63. At one time, timber was a mainstay of the economy. Today it is largely dependent on agricultural production.

Scope and Contents

The Sedgwick, Arkansas records collection consists of one ledger book with annotations of fees and payments regarding the timber trade in the area and one ledger book with 1904 entries for either sales of, or payments for, various goods and materials. The latter appears to be a commercial book of some sort, but is only identified as Sedgwick, AR rather than associated with a particular business.
